

DEPUTY AT DIXON STATE HOSPITAL IS MURDERED

OVER 400 LOST IN EXCURSION BOAT TRAGEDY

French Craft Overturned When Struck By Hurricane Sunday

BULLETIN
St. Nazaire, France, June 15—(UP)—Five searching ships which for hours had worked in tempestuous seas where the excursion steamer Saint Philibert sank off the mouth of the Loire last night returned today with the bodies of 52 of the holiday seekers from the hundreds aboard.

Most of the bodies were those of women and children. Four bodies were washed ashore at St. Gildas point, including that of Captain Oliver, commander of the sunken ship. These brought the total of bodies recovered to 56.

St. Nazaire, France, June 15—(AP)—Dozens of harbor craft picked their way across the Bay of Biscay today with lookouts scanning the water for the bodies of more than 400 men, women and children drowned yesterday when a hurricane capsized the excursion steamer St. Philibert.

Eight persons were rescued and eight bodies have been recovered. It is possible that others escaped death and have not yet reported their safety, but the toll of the disaster was estimated with as much accuracy as possible at 442 dead.

There was an admittedly slim chance that a final check would reveal that many of the passengers had left the boat before the storm struck. It was barely possible also that some of those aboard may have reached the shore in safety between Pointe de St. Gildas and the Loire river. There can be no definite check until the families of those aboard the steamer have reported to the police.

Was Flimsy Craft
The St. Philibert was a flimsy 100-foot river steamer. She put out from Nantes yesterday afternoon with a crowd of picnicers on an outing run by a labor organization steaming down the river to St. Nazaire and across the Bay to the Island of Noirmoutier, not far to the south.

There were 400 passengers on board. The weather was threatening when the steamer started on the return trip and at first it was reported that a hundred or more had decided not to go back by boat. Later this was proved erroneous and it was said that less than 30 remained behind.

Off Pointe de St. Gildas the storm broke with sudden fury. The passengers stampeded to the lee-ward side, threw the boat off an even keel and she turned over.

A lighthouse keeper saw her go down but was helpless.

The number of dead was placed at 442 by Deputy Mayor Blanchon, speaking through his wife.

Madame Blanchon represented her husband, who was exhausted after working all night at the scene of the disaster, in a conference with the press.

Count Toll At 442
"If no better news come to contradict us we must count the total at 442 dead," she said. "Only eight people were saved from the wreck. Only 17 stayed at Noirmoutier instead of returning on the boat. So we must admit that only 25 were saved out of 467."

"At St. Nazaire is mourning. They are still searching but, alas, we have not much hope left."

The bodies of several women passengers were picked up this morning and they were completely devoid of clothing—so powerful was the lashing fury of the waves. The body of an unidentified 18-year-old girl was still warm when fished out but life proved to be extinct after several hours of medical treatment.

The weather was beautiful and the sea calm in contrast to yesterday's savage outburst of the elements. Rescue boats renewed their cruising at daylight to find additional corpses and to pick up any passengers who might have clung to wreckage or drifted on to rocks.

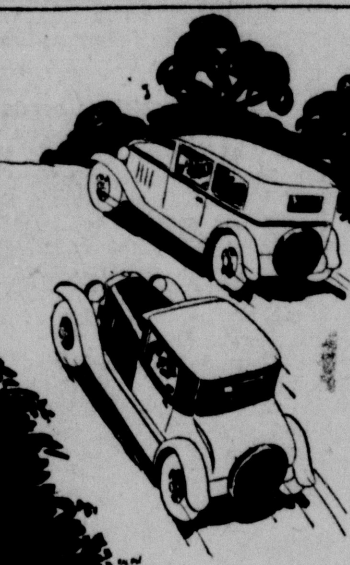

Govt. To Investigate
An official explanation of the cause of the sinking will be sought in a government investigation, the first steps of which already are under way. The master of the craft was not blamed in general opinion, although it was admitted that the weather was extremely bad.

The St. Philibert was a typical river and coastal passenger boat of about a hundred feet in length overall, with two decks and a pilot house close to her single funnel. She was commanded by Captain Olive known as a capable pilot.

The company said the number of passengers was 467 and estimated that 300 were drowned. The others remained on the island, officials

THINK SAFETY

Passing a Car on a Hill or Curve is Dangerous.

Here is a hazard which nearly everyone knows, but which nearly everyone frequently disregards. "The chances are ten to one I won't meet anyone on the brow of the hill," we think. True, but that one chance in ten is often tragic. Passing a car on a hill or a curve is one of the most serious of offenses in motoring.

A marked slowing-up in contributions to the Welfare fund of $5,000 was noted Saturday, despite the fact that the fund had netted $177; and if the work is to be continued as it appears it will be necessary there must be more generous response by the people of the community.

PRISONER GIVES INFORMATION IN FAITHFUL CASE

The Authorities Refuse To Disclose Nature Of His Disclosures

New York, June 15—(UP)—A trail which led to the peak of society of two continents reversed to the level of the underworld today as police went behind prison walls for clues to the death of vivacious and moody Starr Faithfull, whose body was cast up by the sea on a Long Island beach.

The actions of Tucker Faithfull, beautiful young sister of the adventurous Starr, during the week-end on which the girl was drowned possibly by force, were the source of much speculation and mystery to authorities.

The fluctuations of the Faithfull family fortune, from wealth and affluence in Boston society to an old brownstone house in St. Luke's Place on the lower fringe of Greenwich Village, also is under investigation.

While Stanley E. Faithfull has had no means known to police to secure funds, other than his present activity in connection with pneumatic mattresses, his stepdaughter, Starr, made at least ten trips to Europe within recent years, stayed at the best hotels, associated with prominent persons and always appeared to be well supplied with money.

While police continued to delve into the mystery of his involved suggestions of blackmail, trips on ocean liners, affairs with many men and wild parties in which Starr became moody and at times bordered on the maniacal, District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county, planned to go before the grand jury again tomorrow to present additional evidence.

Held Under Water?
Attorney Edwards said Inspector Harold R. King of the Nassau county police still was adamant in his theory the girl was thrown from a boat or jetty at Long Beach and held under water until she was drowned.

Police steadfastly had refused to reveal what information they obtained regarding the case from Henry Goldstein after interviewing him in the west side prison. Goldstein, who gave an address in the exclusive Gramercy Park section of New York, was arrested here June 10 on complaint of the Chief of Los Angeles. He is accused of stealing an automobile, money and jewelry.

Officials would not disclose the nature of Goldstein's theory, but one of the detectives declared it was "important" and would hinder the solution of the case if it were made public now.

Some significance was seen in the fact that Detective Jesse Mayford, who has been investigating for the last two months the mysterious slayings of Abraham Levy, a New York jeweler, whose bullet-pierced body was found on the beach about 10 miles from the spot where Starr's body was washed up, was ordered last night to take up investigation of the Faithfull case.

Mayford was interviewing Goldstein while Inspector King was questioning an unnamed girl in Mineola who was believed to have been with Starr only a short time before she died.

Although King was as reticent about the connection this mysterious girl may have had with the case as was Mayford in his investigation of Goldstein, some speculated that Starr, who had "tasted every thrill in life," may have reached into the underworld as well as the higher strata of society for adventure.

With Jewel Thieves?
It was believed possible Starr's activities outside Manhattan may have linked her in some strange manner with a band of jewel thieves. Whether it was possible she could have had any knowledge of the slaying of Levy could not be determined.

Meanwhile, authorities continued to place increasing importance on the whereabouts of Tucker Faithfull on the Friday, Saturday and Sunday May, Edward told the United Press. Faithfull told the United Press Tucker spent Saturday and Sunday with out-of-town friends and insisted the girl had detailed her whereabouts to Edwards.

While in London Starr lived in luxury, the friend of a peer's son, of artists and ship's officers. But Tucker Faithfull insisted led a different life with different associates and her friends were unknown to Starr.

Police made another search of the Faithfull home last night, diving in back of bookshelves, hidden nooks and three piles of detective magazines, seeking other diaries or love letters left by Starr. It was indicated they might make public the first diary, which contains accounts of love episodes and names and initials of thus far nineteen men whose names were revealed by the book have been questioned and eliminated. Inspector King believes more light may be shed on the girl's past by making the book public.

Important Letters
Love letters written to Starr in the months immediately preceding her death were in the hands of the investigators, who said they were of more importance than the diary. Some of the letters were written a

FARM HOUSE IN NELSON BURNED SATURDAY NIGHT

Tennant House On Mrs. Flora Phillips Estate Consumed

The eight-room dwelling owned by Mrs. Flora Phillips of Sterling, located one mile north of Nelson on the Dick Phillips farm, was totally destroyed Saturday night about 9 o'clock. The home was occupied by D. W. Armstrong, a North-Western fireman, and his family and all of their household effects were totally destroyed.

Neither the Phillips or the Armstrong families were at home when the fire was discovered about 9 o'clock Saturday night and the flames had gained such headway that neither the house or its contents could be saved. The amount of the loss could not be ascertained this morning, but was said to be partially covered by insurance.

Dixon and Sterling fire departments were called to the blaze but could do little because of inadequate water supply. It was reported that $190 in cash, which the Armstrongs had left in the house, was lost with the other contents.

Motorcyclists Are Sought By Officers

Warrants were to be issued today for the arrest of three motorcycle riders who yesterday afternoon were reported to have forced three automobiles from the Lincoln Highway about midway between Dixon and Sterling. H. S. Davidson of Chicago was forced from the paving into the ditch and a passenger sustained a scalp injury and the car was damaged.

Two other drivers, one from Clinton and the other from Davenport, Iowa, reported being forced from the paving by wild riding motorcyclists.

After forcing the Davidson car from the paving into the ditch, the riders of the motorcycle were said to have stopped but refused to give their names and cursed the occupants of the damaged machine, then sped on west toward Sterling. The Sterling police were notified but the motorcyclists had passed west through that city before the highway could be guarded.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF

Chicago, June 15—(UP)—John Packo wounded his wife, Mrs. Theresa, 38, mother of four children, today during an argument, and then turned the gun on himself. Each is in critical condition.

The argument began when Packo and his wife arose this morning and culminated when the husband shot his wife in the jaw. He left his rough side cottage, walked a short distance, and shot himself in the ear.

CASE CONTINUED

Valparaiso, Ind., June 15—(AP)—The trial of Leon Stanford, co-defendant of Virgil Kirgland, in the Arlene Draves murder case, was continued indefinitely today and the jury called to try the case discharged. Prosecutors said the postponement was because of possible developments in the case of Kirgland, who is serving one to ten years in the state reformatory for assault and battery with intent to commit rape.

SWIMMER DROWNS

Wilmington, Ill., June 15—(UP)—Robert Phillips, 33, Chicago, was carried to his death over a power plant dam by a swift current in the Kankakee river here last night. Phillips was swimming in the river and ventured too far into the swiftly running water just above the dam. His body had not been recovered today.

few days before the girl died. A check of the names, initials and pet names signed to these letters with the names and initials mentioned in the diary indicated an entirely new set of men had come into the adventurous girl's life recently.

A search of the Long Island beaches was under way in the hope of finding the girl's hat, coat, bags, shoes and lingerie, which still are missing.

Faithfull, in an exclusive interview with the United Press, declared he was positive Starr had met death at the hands of someone unknown and had not ended her own life. He also denied Starr knew a man by the name of Goldstein.

He admitted Starr had a dual personality and revealed he had tried to adjust the girl's divergent temperaments. Besides him sat Starr's mother, weeping occasionally and corroborating her husband's answers which were given in writing.

Faithfull said he and his wife had watched Starr carefully because she was moody—despondent at times and vivacious at others. He suggested she had a two-sided mentality and said he had made every effort to correct and improve her nature.

CAPONE, AT BAY, SEEKING WAY TO GET COMPROMISE

But U. S. Dist. Attorney Is Determined To Put Gang Czar On Trial

By RAY BRENNAN
Chicago, June 15—(UP)—The government's campaign to put "Scarface Al" Capone and 67 of his gangsters behind the bars gained momentum today when Jack Seinen, one of Capone's right-hand men, surrendered on an indictment charging liquor conspiracy.

Seinen, said to a "pay-off man and fixer" for Capone, walked into the United States Commissioner's office, deposited five $100 bills with a bond clerk and was led out. A scowl and muttered curses were his reply to questions from newspaper reporters.

Meanwhile, Attorney William F. Waugh, chief of Capone's legal staff, announced that Al probably will plead not guilty tomorrow when he is arraigned on one of two indictments, which charge income tax fraud and conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

"I am prepared to enter a plea of not guilty to either charge," said Waugh. "My staff is busy preparing a defense against both charges. We do not know on which charge my client will be arraigned first."

Start of Parade
Seinen's appearance in the Commissioner's office was regarded as the beginning of what is expected to be a veritable parade of Capone gangsters to the federal building.

Prosecutors say Seinen has kept Capone's hired hands obedient and has arranged protection through alleged corrupt politicians and police for the past several years. As such, he is regarded as an important cog in the machine which brought the Capone gang millions in dollars profit from beer and alcohol.

The income last year from beer alone might have paid off all the Christmas savings accounts in Chicago or operated the police department.

U. S. Attorney George E. Q. Johnson says the total would adequately enforce prohibition in America.

"But," added the prosecutor, "even $700,000,000 would not buy Capone his freedom after we convict him."

Capone's hired hands obedient and has arranged protection through alleged corrupt politicians and police for the past several years. As such, he is regarded as an important cog in the machine which brought the Capone gang millions in dollars profit from beer and alcohol.

Seinen was manager of the Padlock Cafe in the loop district, said by government agents to be a meeting place of Capone lieutenants with the lesser employees and with representatives of local government. It was there, they said, that police fixers, beer truck drivers and managers of illegal breweries received their pay.

United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, who directed the scores of government workers in obtaining evidence against Capone on the conspiracy and income tax charges, expressed confidence again today that convictions will be obtainable.

"We don't know whether Capone will plead guilty, but we have promised him no leniency for doing so," said Johnson. "If he pleads not guilty, we are certain of a conviction."

By RAY BRENNAN

United Press Staff Correspondent.
Chicago, June 15—(UP)—Al Capone, the most vicious modern criminal, stood at bay today before the United States government, stripped of money, power and gang.

The scar-faced gang leader was almost alone in his armored hotel suite. His "inner circle" was in prison, or attempting to escape. His beer runners were indicted and fugitives.

Within 24 hours Capone must go before Federal Judge James H. Wilkes and answer two indictments. One charged evasion of income tax on the millions he squeezed from the under and upper world. The other charged wholesale violations of the national prohibition laws over a 10-year period.

Capone, who machine-gunned his way from the post of a Brooklyn saloon bouncer to the head of a billion dollar crime syndicate, has met the only power he ever feared and, gangsterlike, was reported whining for mercy.

Both of the indictments are backed by mountains of evidence, gather erred secretly and painstakingly by the largest force of government agents ever brought to bear on a single criminal organization.

Attempt Compromise
Today Capone's battery of high-priced attorneys were reported trying to compromise with the government on the charges that carry 34 years in prison and $50,000 in fines in case of conviction. The compromise efforts were prompted by the flabby, old Neapolitan, who, cornered, chose arbitration and money as weapons rather than the machine guns that cut down so many of his enemies.

At the office of District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, to whom goes most of the credit for running Capone to earth, there appeared no disposition to compromise. Instead prosecutors were whipping into shape the last bits of evidence they rely on to remove Capone from the nation's crime picture once and for all.

The government prosecutors are veterans in the business of convicting gangsters of evading income tax laws. Within two years it's said gangsters have come before the federal court and the government has not lost a case.

"Nor will we lose this one," a prosecutor told the United Press. "No jury in the world would acquit Capone."

Can't Escape Jury
And Capone can't escape a jury unless Johnson agrees, according to a recent ruling of the Supreme Court. Johnson says he'll never agree.

Capone is the last big prize among his gang leaders to fall a victim to the government's drive.

His brother, Ralph, was convicted of income tax evasion and sentenced to three years; Frank Nitti, his cousin, was sacrificed by Al and pleaded guilty to 18 months without a fight. It was reported at the time that Capone hoped to sacrifice his cousin to stop the government's drive. Jack Guzik, Capone's "business manager," was convicted and sentenced to five years, the longest term ever meted out of an income tax evader. Sam Guzik, Jack's brother, got one year. Frankie Lake and Terry Druggan hurried in to plead guilty, their sentences to depend on the outcome of Ralph Capone's appeal, still ending.

CAPONE, AT BAY,
SEEKING WAY TO

Student Is Hero
Johnson especially pointed out for praise one quiet, unassuming 28-year-old agent who played a prominent part in the smashing of the gang at the risk of his life and in the face of the bribes that in some cases represented a year's salary of $2,800.

The agent is Eliot Ness, a University of Chicago graduate. He with the seven other college graduates perfected the conspiracy case against Capone. Several times while trailing beer trucks or waiting outside Capone's breweries to get evidence, Ness and his fellow agents were offered bribes to move on a block or so and not "see" the beer trucks enter and leave the place.

The gangsters employed all their tricks of intimidation to drive away the agents. Their lives were threatened by telephone bad letter. Their automobiles were stolen. Once the front wheels of Ness' car were stolen as the machine sat over night in front of his home. Private investigators were put on his trail "to get something on" him. Once he was ambushed but disarmed and arrested the gangster, Mike Picchi, a "black hand."

Once Ness gained admittance to a meeting of a secret society and recalled he was recognized when he overheard one man say to another in a foreign language:

"Shall I stick a knife into him?"
In discussing this experience, Ness displayed a humor which carried him through many "tough" spots. "And we had thought everything was going so well, too," he said.

"It offered a lot of excitement," Ness said in discussing his part in the roundup. "There is a big thrill that comes with pitting your wits against another's. It's funny to back a truck up to a brewery door, smash it—and then find something you didn't expect. It's exciting, yes, but there is one thing it never is—monotonous."

Other agents working on the income tax charge poured hours over bank records, accounts seized in speakeasies and notebooks (every gangster carries one) before they ran across the trail of Capone's wealth. They were hampered by the fact he was too canny to keep a bank account. Whenever they ran across a bit of evidence that had any bearing on the prohibition charge it was turned over to the other group.

After two years during which 1,000 persons were interviewed, several hundred witnesses were questioned by the grand jury and agents had travelled all over the country, the government considered it had an income tax against Capone and the indictment was returned.

To amass the evidence in the prohibition charge, records of 10 years were gone into and piece by piece the revelation that Capone was taking in $20,000,000 a year from beer alone was uncovered.

TO STRIKE ELSEWHERE
Washington, June 15—(UP)—Special government agents who secured evidence on which Al Capone was indicted will be quick to follow up their victory in Chicago by striking at gang leaders in other cities, it was indicated today.

Operatives already are at work in New York and Detroit. Racketeers in other large cities also will come under scrutiny, with the income tax weapon being used when indictments cannot be secured on other grounds.

Meantime Director Amos W. W. Woodcock of the federal prohibition Bureau is completing the last details of plans for a vigorous offensive that will be launched July 1 against commercial violators of the dry laws throughout the country.

On that date increased funds appropriated by the last Congress will become available and many new agents will join the enforcement ranks. The new agents will be schooled for two weeks, so the drive will not reach its full power until July 15, Woodcock told the United Press.

Ever since he took office a year ago Woodcock has been preparing for this campaign. The prohibition director now has before him detailed reports on enforcement in every section of the country, together with specific recommendations by his subordinates for improving conditions. On July 1 these plans will be put into effect.

grounds, Davis is said to have discovered the car bearing the Missouri license plates, which the two Negroes and the Negroes were occupying, parked about a block south. When he investigated he immediately suspected a kidnap plot and took the trio to the offices on the institution grounds. The three were reported to have denied any knowledge of the kidnap plot and Blackwell, owner of the car was detained at the office while Davis accompanied Moten and to Dunn woman back to the place where he had first discovered them to await the appearance of the patient.

They had waited but a short time when the Negroes were seen coming toward the car. She observed the deputy sheriff and ran south toward Dixon. Davis fired three shots from his revolver as a signal to other searching parties and the escaped patient had been discovered. He then ordered Moten to return to the institution grounds according to reports. While the car was traveling in that direction three more shots rang out and when attendants arrived, they found Davis' body in the middle of the road. Life was almost extinct and he died a few minutes later, while being removed to the hospital ward at the institution, without making a statement.

Fired Three Shots
The Dunn woman in her statement of the affair made this morning, is reported to have said that Blackwell's 32 calibre revolver lay on the floor of the car between her feet and that as the deputy was returning them to the institution she suddenly reached for the weapon and fired several shots. According to her statement she did not know how many shots she fired. Examination of the weapon disclosed three shells fired and one missed fire. Davis' weapon lay beside him in the road and the revolver used by the Negroes was found a short distance from the scene of the murder this morning at 6 o'clock.

Officials of the state hospital last night found a woman's shoe and a scarf near the scene and these were turned over to Sheriff Fred Richardson at the county jail. The Dunn woman stated that after she fired the pistol, she fell out of the car to the paving and that Moten drove to the entrance of the institution grounds, turned the car around and returned, picking her up and they then sped south through Dixon on route 89.

Fugitive Overtaken
Institution employes overtook the car being driven with the lights turned out at the intersection of the Walton spur with Route 89 and followed it east and south through Walton. In crossing the railroad track passed through the bone of the left leg below the knee and lodged in the fleshy part of the leg, being removed this morning.

The woman's body and clothing were badly torn from crawling through and over barbed wire fences and she was also given medical attention.

Asked this morning why he had attempted to escape after he had denied any knowledge of the shooting, Moten is said to have told the officers that he loved the woman, who was his housekeeper in St. Louis.

Five Lee County Graduates from U. I.

Urbana-Champaign, Ill., June 15—All records will be shattered here Tuesday afternoon when President Harry Woodburn Chase confers degrees on University of Illinois graduates at the 60th Annual Commencement. Including the degrees conferred Saturday by the Chicago departments, the number will exceed more than 2,300, some 200 more than have been granted by the University at one time.

The list includes five from Lee county and a total of 22 from this territory.

These young graduates have seen the University pass through perhaps the greatest year of its life. The largest enrollment in history, the installation of Dr. Chase as sixth president, substantial appropriations from the legislature and outstanding achievements in scholarship and scientific lines, were some of the year's high lights.

For the first time in the history of any educational institution, the University during the year called the attention of the people of the state to the fact that the results of research and investigational work the University has carried on up to the present time is paying back to the state and nation more than one hundred million dollars per year. Other announcements, perhaps less startling, have been important.

This will be Dr. Chase's first Commencement at the University of Illinois. Approximately 400 degrees were conferred Saturday at the Commencement exercises of the Chicago departments of the University—Medicine, Pharmacy, and Dentistry. Of this number 220 were in Medicine, 140 in Pharmacy, and 41 in Dentistry. The rest are from the Urbana departments.

Those from this territory to receive degrees are as follows:

Growth of Civic Music Idea Rapid

Worcester Association, an Example of its Rapid Spread.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

May I comment on your editorial, "Money for Music?"

Undoubtedly the reason for the popularity of fine concerts during the year 1930 was the growth of the Civic Music Idea. Hundreds of cities all over the country have formed Civic Music associations and are bringing three or four concerts a year to their cities at a nominal expense to the members of the association.

Let me cite Worcester as an example. In 1930 we started the Civic Music Association and obtained about 1,200 members. We gave three concerts, including the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra as one. Membership in the association cost $5 and entitled the member to attend all the concerts. In April, 1931, with very little effort, we increased this membership by 450 members and this year we will give a series of four concerts for $5, again including the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, and the Don Cossacks. We cannot extend our membership in the present hall and must wait for the municipal auditorium to be built in order to increase the number of members. For $125 a concert this great number of people of people all over the country have been given an opportunity to hear this fine music and when it is thrown within their reach they are glad and anxious to hear it.

In the face of the radio situation this certainly is an astounding fact that fine concerts have been so well attended during this depression era.

Incidentally, the membership fees are paid by the members during the Spring. The money is all put in the bank and on interest before the concerts start in the Fall. The whole series is paid for in cash and only artists are hired which the association can afford, so the whole financial problem has been dispensed with in this Civic Music plan. When one considers the condition all symphony orchestras financially, this plan has removed the big stumbling block for the average concert, no matter under what auspices it is held.

G. A. R. Veteran Was 90 Years Old Today

Joseph Shelhamer, member of Dixon Post G. A. R. No. 218, and one of the oldest residents of Lee county, today reached the ripe old age of ninety years, and his daughter, Ino Shelhamer, in honor of the event entertained at a birthday dinner Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Meese and sons Edward and James.

As a happy surprise to Mr. Shelhamer, Mrs. Lee Good, who has been a friend of the family for more than forty years and who is a near neighbor, planned a post card shower for Mr. Shelhamer. By Saturday evening he had already received three dozen cards and flowers, and messages and gifts are many. More cards are arriving today, all wishing Mr. Shelhamer many happy days.

Miss Bow to Rest; To Return Then to Pictures

Los Angeles, June 15—(AP)—Clara Bow, her read hair dyed blonde, sought communion with nature today after seven hectic years in the movies.

She looks forward to a month or so in the great open spaces cantering after cattle. After that she expects to return to Hollywood, full of her former pep and vigor, and ready to talk about reappearing in the talkies.

Just before the Bow party—the actress, her friends, Red Bell, and Duke, her Great Dane, in one car, and her nurse, cook and chauffeur trailing in another—left yesterday for Bell's ranch at Nipton, Cal., on the California-Nevada state line, she granted the first lengthy interview since she suffered a nervous

She explained her blonding, almost platinum-hued hair, and the fact that she weighs 125 pounds.

"I had my hair dyed to disguise myself while I went to the dentist," she said, "and the trick worked great. Very few people recognized me. I gained weight while I was sitting around under treatment at the sanitarium. But outdoor life at the ranch will fix that. Andy, my favorite horse, is up there and I'll spend a good deal of my time riding. And I'm going to stick to vegetables, even if Rex does have a lot of good beef at the ranch."

COMING TO OUR SENSES.

Ever since American builders first discovered that by using steel framework they could make buildings far taller and lighter than any that had ever been built before, architects have been putting in their spare time speculating about "the city of tomorrow."

Sketches have been drawn and books have been written; and in most of them we are shown a rather terrifying conglomeration of cloud-scrappers, with elevated sidewalks, hanging gardens, four-deck streets and tall spires that would make the Empire State or Chrysler buildings look puny.

This, they have told us, is what we are coming to. This is what the city of the not-so-distant future will be like.

Now, however, comes Frank Lloyd Wright, whom many consider the best of all American architects, to declare that these prophets are all mistaken. In a new book, "Modern Architecture," Mr. Wright predicts that instead of an era of super-cities and super-skyscrapers we shall have an era of smaller cities and fewer skyscrapers; and he paints a picture that, is, to say the least, rather more attractive than the one we are used to.

His idea is simple. The skyscraper, he says in effect, is a noble achievement; but it must be judged, finally, by its effect on the lives of the people who live in and around it. What do the skyscrapers of today do for us? They cramp us, they give us unbearable congestion, they confine us to city pavements, they force our lives into restricting moulds. Judged on that basis the skyscraper, like the skyscraper city, is a failure.

Indeed, Mr. Wright believes that the city as we know it today will die. Instead of huddling close together in a small space, men will spread out over the countryside. There will still be cities, but they will merely be places where men work; most of the time they will be empty. There will still be tall buildings but they will be widely separated, each with acres of ground about it.

Rapid transit—the auto, the fast train, the airplane—will make all of this possible. People will get back to the land. The ordinary house will have an acre of ground around it. The entire country, in fact, will be "a well-developed park"—buildings standing in it, tall or wide, with beauty and privacy for every one."

There is a great deal of encouragement in Mr. Wright's vision. And yet, after all, he is merely saying that men will come to their senses and will use their new mechanical devices to make life happier and freer. Will not succeeding generations wonder why it took people so long to reach this conclusion?

UNITED STATES FORTUNATE.

A hard political game is being fought by the nations of Europe—a game in which ruthless advantage is taken of every weakness on the part of adversaries. No quarter is given and no confidence exchanged. Duplicité that would blast the reputation of men in ordinary affairs is practiced as a matter of course by the governments lately at war. The game now being played is a form of war, but it is not bound by any of the chivalrous rules of warfare. Fortunately some of the propaganda devices are now known to Americans, and they are not as easily deceived as they were in 1914-16.

It is becoming every year more evident that in keeping the United States out of the League of Nations the Republican Party rendered the country a service of which it has every right to be proud.

A DAMNING PICTURE.

"Just working, working, working all the time."

That was the only explanation offered by a pretty young waitress who was taken to a middle western hospital the other day after making an unsuccessful attempt to end her life by taking poison. Brief as it is, her explanation is terribly expressive.

Back of it there is clearly evident the dreadful monotony that falls over some jobs. One can picture the endless succession of days that were exactly alike; days of hard work, unpleasant living conditions and insufficient recreation. When the sameness of "working, working all the time" can drive an attractive young girl to suicide one gets a damning picture of the lives which some wage earners in modern cities have to live.

The fishing boat pulled in to the shore and planned to sail right out once more. It had a dandy load of fish. They flopped and flipped about. One of the men said, with a smile, "We'll catch a lot more after while. Would you like to join us?" "Course this made the Tinsles shout.

The Travel Man then said, "You bet! All of these boys would surely get a lot of thrilling pleasure from a trip out with you men. And, too, they'll gladly lend a hand until you bring them back to land. You'll find that the little fellows do some fine work, now and then."

So, when the fish were dumped on shore, the Tinsles, with a happy roar, hopped in the little fishing boat and off to sea they sailed. Said wee Clowdy, "This boat is safe and sound. Not even one crack have I found. No water can leak in it so it never need be bailed."

"In the typhoon season we catch more 'cause fish are driven in to-ward shore," explained on the fishermen, "but don't you youngsters fret. The water's calm as it can be and we will sail on merrily. This isn't typhoon season, so no typhoon will we get."

They shortly dropped a great big net. Said Coppy, "Wonder what they will get?" He found out very shortly, when the net was pulled back in. The fish were jumping here and there, but still the catch was only fair. "I'd sure be tickled with that catch," said Clowdy, with a grin.

Then back to the shore the whole bunch went. The next few hours were gaily spent in walking 'long the pretty sand. Wee Carpy shouted loud, "Oh, look! What great big sea crabs. Gee! That woman is happy as can be. No wonder! When you catch that sort, it's reason to feel proud."

FIRST LIBERTY LOAN

On June 15, 1917, subscriptions to the First Liberty Loan were closed with a large over-subscription.

The secretary of the treasury had been authorized under the act of April 24, 1917, to issue bonds to the extent of $5,000,000,000.

A war loan organization was then created to care for the first issue scheduled for $2,000,000,000. Twelve Federal Reserve banks were used as central agencies in the 12 districts. Each bank was allotted a quota of the loan. Liberty Loan committees were formed, and the treasury made use of every available means of publicity.

The first loan was offered to the public on May 14. How well the loan went over is seen in the fact that subscriptions totaling $3,035,226,850 had been received by June 15.

Three other loans besides the final Victory Loan were floated by the United States during the World War.

The American people subscribed a total of $24,072,257,550 in the five campaigns. The fourth loan was the largest, bringing in some seven thousand million dollars. One out of every five persons, men, women, and children, subscribed to this loan.

WASHINGTON ELECTED
June 15, 1775, was a turning point in the affairs of the thirteen colonies and a red letter day in the life of George Washington, for on that day the Second Continental Congress, meeting in the State House in Philadelphia, unanimously chose George Washington Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Forces.

Examining the original Journal of Congress of that session, we read: "Resolved, that a General be appointed to command all the Continental Forces, raised or to be raised for the defense of American liberty."

"That five hundred dollars per month be allowed for the pay and expenses of the General."

"The Congress then proceeded to the choice of a General by ballot, and GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., was unanimously elected."

John Adams, delegate from Massachusetts and destined to succeed Washington as President of the United States almost a quarter of a century later, was the strongest advocate of making the "Gentleman of Virginia" Commander-in-Chief. We have his own words to prove this statement:

"I had no hesitation to declare that I had but one gentleman in my mind for that important command, and that was a gentleman from Virginia, who was among us and very well known to all of us; a gentleman whose skill and experience as an officer, whose independent fortune, great talents, and excellent universal character would command the approbation of all America, and unite the cordial exertions of all the colonies better than any other person in the Union."

John Hancock, President of the Congress, officially notified Washington of his election on the next day, and the newly chosen General, standing in his place, made the following speech of acceptance:

"Mr. President:
"Though I am truly sensible of the high honor done me in this appointment, yet, I feel great distress from a consciousness, that my abilities and military experience may not be equal to the extensive and important trust; However, as the Congress desire it, I will enter upon the momentous duty, and exert every power I possess in their service and for support of the glorious cause. I beg they will accept my most cordial thanks for this distinguished testimony of their approbation."

"But, lest some unlucky event should happen unfavorable to my reputation, I beg it may be remembered by every Gentleman in the room, that I this day declare with the utmost sincerity, I do not think myself equal to the command I am honored with."

"As to pay, Sir, I beg leave to assure the Congress, that as no pecuniary consideration could have tempted me to accept this arduous employment, at the expense of my domestic ease and happiness, I do not wish to make any profit from it. I will keep an exact account of my expenses. These, I doubt not, they will discharge, and that is all I desire."

"Thus began eight arduous years of fighting with independence for the Colonies the prize."

Many States, according to the United States, George Washington Bicentennial Commission, will celebrate June 15, 1932, as one of the feature days of the ten months' celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

COLLAPSING THE LUNG

Pneumothorax is by far the most common of the surgical procedures employed in the treatment of tuberculosis of the chest.

Pneumothorax, as the name implies (pneuma—air, thorax—breast plate, i. e. chest) consists of the injection of a gas into the space between the chest wall and the lung proper.

The gases ordinarily used for pneumothorax are nitrogen and more commonly, filtered air. The injection is made by inserting a hollow needle through the muscles and the pleural layer of the chest wall and pumping air into what is known as the pleural space.

This procedure has the effect of collapsing the lung. In uncomplicated cases, this operation is a simple one and without danger.

In a complete pneumothorax, the lung shrinks to an astonishing degree and gathers up into a bean-shaped mass around its roots, the bronchi.

In this condition the collapsed lung is at rest. It no longer expands and contracts under the influence of the breathing movements.

From 200 to 800 cubic centimeters of gas are injected. The gas is gradually absorbed and disappears and with the decline of pressure the lung tends to re-expand.

In order to keep the lung collapsed, it becomes necessary from time to time to refill the pleural space with new gas. When the lung is healed, and no more gas is injected, the lung may re-expand to its normal size. It then functions normally.

In addition to being employed as a measure of treatment for the tuberculosis proper, pneumothorax may also be used in the control of cases with repeated hemorrhages, or as an emergency measure in cases of severe hemorrhage where life is endangered.

COOKING CROQUETTES AND ROASTING COFFEE HAVE MUCH IN COMMON

Success Depends Upon the Rule—A Little at a Time

Careful cooks do not crowd too many croquettes into the hot fat because they lower the temperature and then absorb grease. Cooking a few at a time prevents this. In roasting coffee there is similar difficulty when too much is roasted at once. It is impossible to control the heat and often, as a result, part of the batch is overdone and part underdone. This causes variation in flavor.

Hills Bros., following the rule in the croquette recipe, roast only a few pounds of coffee at a time by their patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting. There is no variation in the roast because there is accurate control of the heat, also of the flow of coffee through the roasters. A rare, uniform flavor is developed such as no other coffee has.

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee in vacuum cans that keep it fresh. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is removed from the cans when they are packed, and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh. Ask for Hills Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Hills Bros. Coffee, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

Bishop Sues Hearst For Million, Half

Los Angeles, June 13.—(UP)—William Randolph Hearst and the Los Angeles Examiner were charged with libel and conspiracy to defame the character of Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a suit for $1,500,000 damages on file today by Bishop Cannon.

George Young, publisher of the Examiner, a Hearst newspaper, also was named as a defendant.

Bishop Cannon charged that since the presidential campaign of 1928 Hearst had sought to "destroy the reputation of the plaintiff by false, defamatory and libelous publications," and that the publisher had vigorously opposed prohibition and conspired to destroy the influence of prohibition leaders.

Hearst, the complaint charged, caused propaganda pertaining to Cannon to be published in many newspapers, magazines and other publications.

LINCOLN'S BODY WAS LAST SEEN THIRTY YEARS AGO

Casket Opened To Prove Rumors Of Substitut- ion Were Untrue

(Editor's Note—This is the third of a series of four articles dealing with the rededication of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, which has been reconstructed at a cost of $175,000, by President Herbert Hoover at Springfield, Wednesday. The first article told of plans for the rededication, the second dealt with adventurous associations of the tomb, today's concerns the condition of the Emancipator's body, which was last viewed thirty years ago and tomorrow's will be a description of the remodelled monument.)

By DON E. CHAMBERLAIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
Springfield, Ill., June 15 —(UP)—The body of Abraham Lincoln, martyred Civil War President, and whose remodelled tomb will be rededicated in Oak Ridge cemetery here by President Herbert Hoover, Wednesday, was last viewed thirty one years ago.

At that time the Emancipator's body with that of Mrs. Lincoln was removed from a dirt grave beneath the tomb to allow workmen to restore certain parts of the monument.

Shortly after the removal of the bodies skeptics expressed doubt that it was really Lincoln that had been buried, and in order to confound these doubters, officials ordered a strip of the leaden casket cut away so that a free view might be obtained of his face.

This was done and it was found that the body was well preserved.

Witnesses who were there and who are alive today declared that "anyone who had ever seen a picture of Mr. Lincoln would have known instantly that it was him," according to H. W. Fay, tomb custodian.

Casket Resealed
After the body had been viewed and all were satisfied that it was really Lincoln the leaden casket was resealed, given a triple covering of wood, lead and wood, and reburied.

Only this time those in charge of the tomb went a step further in taking precautions against another attempt to steal the body, having in mind the frustrated attempt made in November, of 1876, by burying it in a steel cage beneath the monument.

Excavators dug a large hole about fifteen feet beneath the chamber where Lincoln's sarcophagus now stands and filled in the bottom of the hole with concrete. Steel bars were laid on top of this, fine cement poured on it and the casket containing "Old Abe's" body placed on it. Then more cement was added to give steel bars arranged alongside the casket, a footing. After this cement hardened, concrete was poured until the casket was fully covered when more steel bars were placed crosswise on it and cement and concrete poured in until the whole thing was a solid steel and concrete block ten feet square.

It has never since been disturbed.

Well Preserved
According to Fay, an authority on Lincoln, those who witnessed the Emancipator's body in 1900 recently told him that it was in an excellent state of preservation.

"They said that it would be impossible for anyone who had ever seen a picture of Lincoln to fail to recognize the body as that of Mr. Lincoln," he said.

Fay also said that he had talked to scientists who declared that if the body remained as well preserved between the time it was first embalmed and 1900 as those who saw it in the latter year said it was, it would continue to remain that way for a hundred years without perceptible change.

Fay, who owns the greatest collection of Lincoln photographs and paintings in the world and who is reported to have refused a recent offer of $200,000 for it, however, does not believe that Lincoln's body will continue to rest where it is forever without being disturbed.

"American curiosity," he said, "is not such as to allow a situation to go on and on without doing something about it and it would not be surprising if some one during this century were to excavate the body by chiseling the casket from its concrete grave to get a glimpse of Mr. Lincoln's remains just to make sure that it is really he."

Merchants At Dam
City Picked By U. S.
Beno, Nev.—(UP)—Boulder City, the new government townsite at the Hoover dam, in southern Nevada, is not being established on a basis of "the survival of the fittest," but Uncle Sam says who can go into business there and picks those that the Department of the Interior think can best serve the workers.

The Interior Department has taken the position that following the establishment of Boulder City on a permanent basis, and after the hysteria of the boom period has passed, they will remove all restrictions and allow the laws of economics to operate.

According to Louis C. Cramton, former Congressman and the city's "czar," the "situation is greatly aggravated by the present economic condition of the country, where every one is looking for a more fertile field and are likely to let their hopes get the better of their judgment."

"Had we thrown down the bars," he said, "there is no question but that 1,000 business houses would have tigation beyond the roseate stories in opened up without any sort of investigation that is not here."

Washington News

By Chas. F. Scott

Washington, D. C. — One of the activities of the Federal Government of which little note is taken by the people generally, but which is really of vast importance to the country is the search that is constantly being made all over the world under the direction of the office of Foreign Plant Introduction, Department of Agriculture, for new varieties of plants that may be profitably grown in the United States. Nearly all well-informed farmers will remember that they owe Durum wheat and soybeans and many varieties of sorghums to this exploration work. But it doubtless will be in the nature of news to nearly everybody to learn some of the things that have been accomplished or at least experimented with in more recent years. Some of the recent importations are as follows: A palm tree which yields a delicious vegetable from its young shoots, a delicate sugar from its sap, a fragrant fruit of which the hull is edible, and leaves useful for a variety of purposes; a potato substitute which grows to the size of a large pumpkin; and a blueberry which grows well on dry, sandy soil far from streams; a raspberry with fruit more than three-fourths of an inch long; a very tough, short Japanese grass which may prove to be as, a 35-foot tree of which the leaves can be substituted for spinach, and honeysuckles, which, after they have bloomed, bear edible fruits.

Another activity of the Federal Government which has received little publicity but which will interest and doubtless please a great many people is the campaign the Department of Labor has been carrying on quietly for some months to search out and return to the countries where they belong aliens who were illegally resident in the United States.

Under this policy, directed of course by President Hoover, some 20,000 illegally entered aliens have been deported. Coincident with this campaign, and also under the President's instruction, the provision in the immigration law which bars admission to aliens who are likely to become public charges has been rigidly enforced, the very sound theory being that with large numbers of our own people unemployed any alien who may come to our shores depending upon his labor for his living must almost inevitably become a charge upon the public. Under the first five months of this policy 96,883 immigration visas were denied and the reduction of non-quota visas from Canada and Mexico was reduced from 60,000 to 5,000. The application of these two policies, restricting the immigration to those who probably would not be able to earn a living here and deporting those who have no lawful right to be here has resulted in a fairly even balance—practically as many being deported as are being received. Those received are members of families of men already here or are able to give proof that they will be able to support themselves.

President Hoover usually follows the tradition of his high office in carefully writing out anything he may have to say to the public, or to any large assembly, knowing that he will be quoted and not wishing to be misquoted. In Philadelphia, however, on the eve of Memorial Day when he was a guest of the famous Union League Club, he departed from his usual practice because he had been promised in advance that an address would not be expected from him. The occasion was such, however, that some acknowledgment on his part seemed appropriate and in a brief address he demonstrated that he by no means lacked facility in extemporaneous speech, when he said in closing:

"It is pleasant to be with you this evening in these historic precincts. This house is more than a place of comradeship or a sanctuary of a great political tradition; it is also the shrine of a memorable enterprise to support and preserve the Union. The memory of the great public services of the Union League which spread over our country in protection of our national existence is expressed in every portion of this building. In all the years since that time the club has stood steadfastly for solution of the multitude of questions which have confronted the Republic with a sense of high patriotism. It has pierced the fallacy of many specious causes; it has advocated and forwarded great measures of sound progress. To keep a balanced mind and an untainted spirit in times of public stress has been a tradition of the club. The centrifugal forces of fear and unreason are oft-times an especial danger to the self-government of a people whose sole reliance for maintenance of social order is within themselves. On the other hand, the zeal to progressive action in time of comfort and complacency is equally difficult to maintain. Both are essential to the orderly evolution of our national life. After two years of the fever and tumult of Washington, I do assure you there is a grateful coolness and quiet restfulness in this place. I thank you for it. I shall long remember with appreciation this quiet hour in a house where history broods, where tradition is remembered, where living men of great responsibilities stand ready to serve the public."

HOOVER'S FIRST SPEECH WILL BE MADE THIS EVE

Starts An Important Tour Of Midwest: To End In Springfield

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
Aboard President's Special Train, June 15—(UP)—President Hoover's special train was carrying him through West Virginia and Kentucky today bound for Indianapolis, where tonight he is expected to lay before Indiana Republicans and the waiting political workers of the country at large an outline of the Republican defense preparatory to the presidential campaign.

Seldom has a presidential campaign swung into its gait so early, but with Republican party leaders at the National Young Republican conference in Washington last week proclaiming Mr. Hoover as the party's candidate for next year, and with Democratic leaders gathering in increasing numbers behind Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, the present trip of Mr. Hoover into states which are expected to be closely contested next year has assumed in the eyes of most politicians the nature of an opening offensive.

Mr. Hoover's address tonight will be before the Indiana Republican Association at Indianapolis. He will dedicate the Harding tomb at Marion, Ohio, and review G. A. R. veterans at Columbus Tuesday. On Wednesday he will dedicate the remodeled tomb of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, Ill. He will have travelled 2300 miles when he returns to Washington Thursday.

The President's train schedule was arranged so that he could pass through the more populous sections of West Virginia and northern Kentucky by day. This necessitated a three-hour lay over during the night at Waynesboro. Mr. Hoover invited

Governor G. Conley and Senator D. Hatfield, Republicans, of West Virginia, to ride with the party from Charleston to Huntington.

The presidential train was due to go through Cincinnati in mid-afternoon, reaching Indianapolis in time for Mr. Hoover to receive members of the editorial association and a small delegation of Civil War veterans at the Governor's Mansion before proceeding to the fair grounds for the dinner of the Editorial Association at 6:30 P. M., CST. This banquet will be attended by possibly 5,000 persons including most of the Republican party workers of the state.

Mr. Hoover's address will be broadcast. The President and Mrs. Hoover will be guests of Governor Leslie overnight and will leave immediately after breakfast tomorrow for Marion, Ohio.

POET'S CORNER

OUR FLAG

Oh beautiful flag, the red, white, and blue,
We love you, because you stand for what's true.
The Emblem of a nation who have fought for their right,
And guarded their flag by day and by night.

Let us honor our flag, and please don't forget
As you gaze on its beauty, you owe it a debt.
That debt is protection, from now and all
The rich, the poor, the great, and the small.

As you look at the flag, as it waves in the air,
May we each one remember
What our Corp had to share to shield old Glory,
That it may be honored everywhere.

For they all marched together at their country's call,
To support their flag that it should not fall.
Their blood was split, that dyed the stripes red,
In this beautiful flag that flies over our head.

As they lived for the right,
They have made the stripes white
And as their lives were true they have formed the blue
In your flag and my flag, the most wonderful flag,
The red, white, and blue.

The pattern for this flag began
In days gone by,
When Jesus shed his precious blood
For sinners such as you and I.

MOTORISTS CONCERNED IN THESE TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS FA ILED TO THINK SAFETY

Stop, look and listen at railroad crossings, if you would avoid the fate of the driver in the accident shown here. By slowing down at the crossing, he would have seen the train in time.

Crash! And here's the result of slow thinking on someone's part. Statistics show that most automobile accidents are avoidable. They're caused mainly through some mental slip-up on the part of a driver, it is said. A five-year-old boy met death in this crash. He would have been alive today if someone had thought SAFETY!

A hit-and-run driver forced this car into a lamp post and injured four persons. There's no doubt that the accident could have been avoided if the man who caused it had thought SAFETY!

WEEKLY DOLE OF $15 FROM STATE DEMAND OF IDLE

"Hunger Marchers" Were Not Molested At Capital Convention

Springfield, Ill., June 15—(UP)—A weekly dole of $15 and an additional two dollars a week for each dependent topped a list of demands which a delegation from a convention of 500 delegates of State Unemployment Councils had prepared today for presentation to the Illinois state legislature late this afternoon.

The convention, held in connection with a "hunger march" of unemployed on the state Capitol city yesterday and Saturday, adopted the demands along with several proposals for unemployment legislation as they were assembled in a local fraternal hall under police guard yesterday afternoon.

Other demands which the delegation plans to present to the legislature include provisions for canceling of debts of impoverished farmers, the abolishment of sheriff's sales of poor farmers' homes, and the doing away with taxes on them.

According to Nels Kjar, Chicago, secretary of the convention, the purpose of the meeting and "hunger march" was to unite the destitute farmer and unemployed worker on a relief program.

"The farmers are starving because of low prices and because he is being taxed to death," said Kjar. Most of the "hunger marchers" were scheduled to start back to their homes today following a parade yesterday through Springfield's streets with an escort of foot and motorcycle police.

As they marched through the streets the "hunger marchers" which included a number of women and children, they were led by Miss Louise Morrison, Chicago, who also acted as cheer leader in organizing roving along the route.

The name of President Herbert Hoover linked with the word prosperity was greeted with an organized shout of "Boo! Boo, Boo!" One of the principal slogans of the marchers was "hurrah for Soviet Russia" following by three "rahs."

Under an agreement with state police the marchers were allowed to meet in a public park, to parade through the streets and hold a convention in a downtown hall. The agreement provided that they keep together and leave the city after their convention was over and not try to spread over the city.

To enforce this agreement state and city police acted as an escort to the visitors. Delegates came from all sections of the state. Among cities represented were Chicago, Rock Island, East St. Louis, Belleville, Peoria, Rockford, Johnson City, Peru, Springfield, Valley, Moline, Marion and Granite City.

Marchers wore white ribbons on which red letters were printed as follows: "Illinois hunger march." Officers of the convention were: Carl Schultz, Belleville, chairman; and Nels Kjar, secretary.

ASSAILED BY BARRETT

Carlinville, Ill., June 15—(UP)—Assailing the assemblage of "hunger marchers" and unemployed in Springfield yesterday as "an army which shirks responsibilities of citizenship," State Treasurer E. J. Barrett, Chicago, today called on the American Legion to "strike down the Bolshevik, advocating the red menace which has in its throes continental Europe and is reaching out for the continent of North America."

Addressing a meeting of the Fourth District division of the American Legion here, Barrett praised Legionnaires to whom he gave credit for preserving "order and constitutional government," at a time when "economic chaos is at our very door."

Barrett then attacked Communism which, he said, is endeavoring to arrest every purpose to which our country is dedicated.

"We are engulfed in a sea of chaos the disorders of which are reflected in our economic, political and social well being," he said. "Yesterday marching from many points in the state to our Capitol, Springfield, and the home of Abraham Lincoln was an army which shirks the responsibilities of citizenship, which holds contempt for constitutional government, unmindful of the conditions making necessary the foundation of America."

Officials Urge Everyone Learn U. S. Fishing Law

Washington—Everyone interested in the protection of the black bass should familiarize himself with the provisions of the recently enacted federal black bass law as it is applicable to both anglers and commercial fishermen, according to officials of the American Game Association.

Briefly the law prohibits transportation of largemouth and smallmouth black bass from one state to another that have been caught, sold or transported contrary to existing state law; in other words, a violation of the federal law is predicated on a violation of state law; then the fish must be taken out of the state where the state violation occurred.

One of the important features of the law is that section which requires any package or container containing such black bass transported interstate shall be clearly and conspicuously marked on the outside with the name "Black Bass," and accurate statement of the number of bass contained, and the names and addresses of the shipper and consignee.

An important section is that relating to the seizure of black bass transported in violation of the law; fish illegally transported interstate may be seized by any authorized employee of the Department of Commerce, or U. S. Marshal, which are forfeited upon conviction, or if the U. S. judge believes a violation occurred.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, the direct government agency charged with the enforcement of the federal black bass law, declares it is not intention to prosecute persons who are unfamiliar with the law at this time for rival infractions, but it solicits the hearty cooperation of the hook and line fishermen in upholding the law which was passed and is being enforced for their direct benefit.

Copies of the law may be obtained from the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, Washington, D. C. Pennsylvania has recently joined the list of states prohibiting the shipment of black bass into their states.

down for once and for all that snarling serpent feeding upon the very vitals of our economic, social and constitutional systems—the Bolshevik advocating the red menace which has in its throes continental Europe and is reaching out for China, Japan and the continent of North America."

Flag of Ideals.

"Our flag is the flag of ideals. Although we honor this flag today as the flag of our fathers, we do also with reverence declare that it is the flag of our children and their children's children yet unborn. Filled with faith and armed with courage, we look to its stars as ideals yet to be realized. Many of the benefits of human government under it today are but the realization of the dreams of yesterday and so we dream and subscribe today to those ideals of citizenship that will lead this people to a greater unselfishness, nobler life of human service, until all the world at the very sight of the Stars and Stripes shall rejoice and be glad. We are the sons and the daughters of that flag. In a very real sense we honor it for what it is today and by our lives we make it what it will be tomorrow. No matter what our creed, our class or our color, no matter what station we occupy in life, no matter how humble our activity may be, if we are loyal, true, courageous, diligent and honest, we do it honor."

OLD GLORY GIVEN TRIBUTE AT FINE FLAG DAY SERVICE

Patriotic Address Was Delivered Last Eve By Atty. Brooks

The Elks annual Flag Day services held Sunday evening at the Methodist church was very largely attended by delegations of the local patriotic organizations and citizens. Headed by the drum and bugle corps of Boy Scouts, the Elks marched in a body from the club house to the church. The regular Elks Flag Day ritual was carried out by the officers of the lodge and this was followed by a very interesting address given by Assistant State's Attorney C. Weyland Brooks of Chicago, a former Dixon resident.

The speaker in his opening paid a tribute to the lodge of Elks in their commemoration and observation of the birthday of the American flag and the patriotic principals practiced. He then briefly reviewed the history of the flag in which he said:

"Flying as a National Emblem our flag rose first over the thirteen original states along the Atlantic seaboard with a population of some three million people. Today, as we assemble here to do it honor, it flies over forty-eight states extending across the entire continent, over the great islands of the two oceans and one hundred-thirty million people owe it their allegiance. It has been brought to this proud position by love, labor and sacrifice. Its citizens have advanced it, its heroes have died for it and preserved it. This flag, born in war, was preserved in war."

Flag of Great Souls.

"Our flag is a flag of just plain folks. It is the flag of great souls who win no fame, whose daily lives are a triumph over toil and drab duty, those who carry so well the weight of the nation's care that they keep the patience ever on the side of joy. They bring up us, they cheer us, they induce us—they are your folks and mine. They live in and for their children, strengthening them and sheltering them. They are everywhere along the common ways, they are obscure, accepting what fate offers, not complaining but ever enduring, not parading, but ever sacrificing. They are the true heart of America. They are millions strong, welded into one nation, and this is their flag."

"Our flag is a flag of a glorious future. Our country is a young country, strong and beautiful, where work, joy, sorrow and triumph are open to all, a land of adventure and a land of opportunity with a short but noble tradition and none of the dust of the ages. We cast away quickly the outgrown and the outworn and we advance under that flag in the world's new life. Flying from the lofty heights of American achievement, it is the beacon of enduring hope for the future to the oppressed of all lands. It floats over a massed assemblage of people from every racial stock of the earth whose united hearts constitute an invincible force for the defense and the success of the unfortunate and downtrodden."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 14.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore" (Psalms 121:8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints" (Proverbs 2:6-8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Whatever is governed by God, is never for an instant deprived of the light and might of intelligence and life" (p. 215).

ARMED STRENGTH OF U. S. IS MADE PUBLIC TO WORLD

Sec. Stimson Sends Full Detailed Information Of Nations' League

Washington, June 15—(AP)—The American government has undertaken the task of encouraging worldwide preparation for the League of Nations general disarmament conference by submitting to the League data on its military strength.

The information was forwarded with a formal note from Secretary Stimson in which he expressed the "hope that other nations may thus be encouraged to lay their figures before the public without delay." He asked that the figures on the total land, sea and air forces of the United States be made public and distributed among the other powers.

Hugh S. Gibson, American Ambassador to Belgium, directed the preparation of the information. He is a probable delegate to the conference to be held at Geneva next February.

Without regard to dispatches from Europe that an effort to postpone the conference might be made, the State Department expedited the sending of the data to the League. The opinion was expressed by high government officials that there would beon postponement.

Total Force Given

The data gave America's total land effectives as 139,957 men, including 13,089 officers. The National Guard was listed at "10,774 average daily effectives" and was not included in the total forces because it was reported "not available to the federal government, without measures of mobilization."

The total strength of the naval force was fixed at 109,886 men, including 10,429 naval officers, 1030 officers and 17,500 enlisted personnel of the Marine Corps. The Marines were rated as of "average strength," while the Army and Navy were credited with having no "formations organized on a military basis" capable of use without "measures of mobilization."

Under the head of naval ship strength were the tables as annexed to the London naval treaty. The total armed air forces including effectives in the Army and Navy were placed at 27,324 officers and men, of which 13,155 were credited to the Army Air Corps and 14,169 to the Naval Air Force.

The total number of airplanes in the armed forces was listed as 1752, including 965 Army craft and 787 Naval planes. Three Army and two Navy dirigibles, including the Los Angeles, were added. It was explained that neither branch had air components capable of service without mobilization measures.

KEEPS SUICIDES SECRET AS "HUMANE" THING TO DO

Youngstown, Ohio—(UP)—Coroner M. E. Hayes of Mahoning county has kept "quite a number" of suicides secret, because it is "humane" to shield the victim's family from notoriety.

This practice, which his critics claim is a violation of city laws, came to light with the recent discovery that James McAleer, former major league manager, killed himself. Previously the death had been reported due to natural causes and no reports had been made to police.

"Sure, I've covered up quite a number of suicides," Hayes replied readily to his interrogators. "Furthermore, I'm going to continue to do it. I believe it is the humane thing to do."

TO ANSWER STATION WOW

Washington, June 13—(AP)—The Radio Commission today began preparing its answer to an appeal from one of its decisions refusing additional broadcasting time to station WOW, Omaha.

Commission attorneys said the answer in the case, which cannot be heard before the fall, would be based upon reasons the commission said did not justify allowing WOW full time on a frequency of 590 kilocycles. WOW now has six-sevenths time on the wave length; station WCAJ of Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln, using the remainder.

THAT advertising through the printed page has the necessary attractiveness and efficiency of performance that brings profitable results.

History has shown that continuous advertisers have found success, while non-advertisers have always been lagging behind.

Lack of advertising is killing many a business that should show increasing business instead of decreasing business.

People have been educated to the fact that well advertised products are the quality kind and they won't buy any other.

Continuous advertising of quality creates a buying demand which assures the advertiser quicker turnover.

Any business in this day and time cannot stand still. Progress and competition demand that it move ahead or go out of business.

Continuous advertising of quality and service builds and keeps the confidence of the public. Without the confidence of the public, no business can move ahead.

Continuous advertising is the modern way of building better business. It proves to the public that the advertisers are proud of what they have for sale.

Anything worth selling is worth advertising.

Advertising is the most effective selling help that can be found, because continuous advertising paves the way to bigger sales.

Every business having something to sell should advertise continuously so the public may know who they are, where they are, and what they have for sale.

Lee Co. Farm Bureau Affairs

A new barn is being erected on the John Malach farm in Nelson Township, tenanted by Geo. Glaser. Also a new silo is being drilled. This was made necessary because of the high tension line crossing over the old barn.

Mrs. Florence Syverud, Home Adviser, returned Saturday from a week's conference of Home Advisers at Urbana. She was accompanied by Mrs. Maude Watson, Adviser of Stephenson county.

C. E. Yale, Farm Adviser, spent some time in Paw Paw one day last week, laying out plans for a rock garden and lily pool for Mrs. Frank Nangle.

The Farm Bureau base ball game scheduled for Amboy, Saturday, between Carroll and Lee counties, had to be postponed on account of rain. A later game will be scheduled.

Miss Mildred Reinboth, Assistant Club leader of Lee County and two of her 4-H Club girls are attending the 4-H boys' and girls' Club Tour being held in Urbana this week.

Between 40 and 50 attended the Dairy Herd Improvement Association Fair-Alfalfa tour held last Tuesday. The first stop was made at the F. M. Yocum farm near W. Brookline to see the alfalfa field, from there the group went to the August Schlesinger farm to see the alfalfa pit showing the different types of alfalfa being grown; from there to the George Thier farm to see his herd of dairy cattle, and from there to the John Torti farm, also to view the dairy herd. The last stop was at Lowell Park where a picnic dinner was enjoyed, after which a judging contest was held, and talks given by C. S. Rhode and J. C. Hinkleman from the University of Illinois.

Practically all the towers on the Super Power Company high tension line between Kewanee and Dixon are now erected through most of the counties. A minimum amount of damage was done, and settlements have been made with all the land owners who stayed with the Farm Bureau Committee, which have been very satisfactory.

Fewer Fatal Taxi

Accidents In 1929

Springfield, Ill., June 15—(UP)—Taxicabs and buses operated in Illinois were involved in 21 per cent fewer fatal accidents during 1929 than during 1928 and 30 per cent fewer than in 1917, according to statistics compiled by the State Department of Health, and announced here today.

Trucks were involved in 15 per cent fewer fatal accidents during 1929 than in 1928, according to the figures. Partial analysis of the 1930 statistics indicate a continuation of this trend, the report stated.

"Fatal motor vehicle accidents in general, however, were 10 per cent higher in 1929 than in 1917 and 32 per cent higher in 1930 than in 1917," the announcement stated.

"A number of carefully conducted studies show that fair, clear weather prevailed at the time when more than 80 per cent of the fatal accidents occurred. Excessive speed is one of the most frequently designated items among the dominant causative factors of fatal motor car accidents."

"A detailed study of the families of fatal motor accident victims in Kansas showed that for each 100 fatalities the breadwinners of 29 dependent children were lost. If that rate prevailed in Illinois, motor car accidents last year deprived 715 children of the parent upon whom

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

RENE, however, hopes that a radio career will help her forget her hopeless love for TOMMY WILSON who is engaged to her half-sister, IRIS. EVERETT, Young PRENTISS GAYLORD pays attention to Rene until Irene learns that he is rich and tries to win him. Finally she succeeds. After a hasty marriage they decide to leave for Gaylord's western home, in despair Tommy drinks heavily, loses his job and joins evil companions.

Beryl is depressed when she goes to seek Tommy to persuade him to leave the boot-legging gang. Her throat becomes worse and the doctor says she is dying. When Tommy realizes that Beryl has made this sacrifice to save him he reforms, gets another job, and starts night courses to finish college.

Beryl is happy until Irene quarrels with Prentiss over her affair with DERRY MEADE and comes home to wait for a divorce. She fears Beryl's heart as she realizes Irene is trying to win back Tommy's love. Mrs. EVERETT questions Irene about the little letters she is receiving from Derry. Irene decides to dispose of them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

IRENE had consumed two muf- fins before she decided she might as well begin immediately with her plan for getting rid of Derry Meade.

"Will you press my green silk dress?" she asked her mother. "I want to wear it on the train."

"On the train?"

"Yes, I'm leaving this afternoon for Oakdale. I've some business there to attend to," Irene added importantly.

Her mother was worried. "There's nothing wrong, is there?" she inquired anxiously.

Irene shrugged. "No, it's just something I want to see Gaylord about."

Her mother's face cleared and Irene guessed that she hoped there was to be a reconciliation. Irene had intended her to hope this, thereby making her own departure easier.

Mrs. Everett did not question her further. "Please don't say anything to Beryl and Dad until I'm gone," Irene asked. "I don't care to talk about my plans."

Her mother agreed with her that silence was best. Irene left without saying goodbye to Tommy, and since her mother would naturally lead him to suppose she had gone to remain Irene hoped he would realize his loss.

All the way to Oakdale she occupied herself with thoughts of her return to Tommy, making plans for their future together and even planning their wedding. She'd wear a gown of delicate pink with just the softest tint of yellow in it. A satin with deeper rose slippers, hat to match and an armful of pink and yellow roses.

Really it wasn't so far to Oakdale—not half the distance it had seemed when she left the town.

She must watch out for that little station they called Old Town, where Oakdale had been before it moved up the hill. She would get off the train there and telephone. Surely there would be a telephone in the station. It would be too great a risk to go on to the Oakdale station where she would be sure to encounter some acquaintances.

IRENE had written home about the beautiful Oakdale station once, to boast that Mr. Prentiss, her father-in-law, had given the park adjoining it to the town and placed a handsome drinking fountain in the middle of the park in honor of the memory of his deceased wife, Gaylord's mother.

She thought of this now, as the train bearing her back to the scene of her brief married life, slowed for the stop at Old Town. It was an express but all trains stopped at Old Town. You could get off the fast trains there, but you could not get on them. Irene had little fear of meeting anyone she knew in Old Town.

She thought of the prominence of the Prentiss family. Tommy Wilson was a nice boy. She really loved Tommy. But the Prentiss mansion was the finest house in town. Darn Derry Meade anyhow! Why didn't he stay where he belonged and not go chasing after young married women. . . .

Irene was working up a state of righteous indignation against Derry. He was to blame for all this. Gaylord's father had been going to give her a car of her own choice next summer. He'd even hinted about a generous settlement on both mother and child when the first Prentiss grandchild should arrive.

Irene wondered if she hadn't been hasty in making him understand she considered it far too early in her life for her to think of having children.

"That's all old people ever think of when their children get married," she remembered complaining to Gaylord. "It's perfectly disgusting! Don't they suppose a girl wants to have a little pleasure in life before she settles down?"

She had not quite understood the way Gaylord had looked at her on that occasion.

The porter helped her off the train and Irene gave him a quarter. He pocketed it with no warmth of gratitude in his mumbled, "Thank you, Miss."

Irene had been a difficult passenger. She had drunk and she wanted it kept on ice. She had flowers and stacks of magazines. She'd bought them all herself and taken a drawing room besides. But she did not deny her fellow passengers the pleasure of looking at her flowers. She kept her drawing room door open and the flowers on display during the day. The fruit was brought to her after meals in the dining car. Tea was served to her in her room and she went back several times for dainties she thought she would like.

IT made her feel like a princess to travel thus and she half-hoped the other passengers would think her a motion picture actress going to Hollywood. She kept her motion picture magazines prominently in sight.

In company on the trip there were several fascinating young men who picked up magazines and opened doors for Irene, who gave her a seat whenever she appeared in the crowded club car, though the only proper place for her on the train was the observation platform.

Those who remained on the train by the time it reached Oakdale were sorry to see her go but the porter was not. "Two bits on a couple measly dimes," he grumbled to a fellow porter.

The other porter showed a dollar from a lower berth passenger and grinned. "I've laughin' las," he proclaimed heartily.

Irene had to carry her suitcase herself when she finished saying goodbye to her new acquaintances just outside the train. She hadn't wanted to have it taken into the station until she saw who was about. The suitcase was light. She'd told her mother she wouldn't bother about her wardrobe until her "business" in Oakdale was settled. Mrs. Everett understood this to mean until Irene had made up with Gaylord.

Seeing no one she knew Irene entered the small and dingy station and looked around for a telephone. There was none in the waiting room and the station agent was away.

Across the street there was a small general store. Irene went over to see if she could telephone there. She was annoyed to find the instrument in the open but the store was deserted except for the presence of a young man who told her she could use the telephone "with pleasure," and she needn't say much to Derry.

The young man had been staring at her, at first openly and then, apparently remembering his manners, more guardedly, ever since she entered the place. Irene was flattered. She accepted this interest as a compliment. Her fur coat was Eastern mink and if the youth didn't know that he couldn't help knowing it wasn't cheap. Her snug little hat which barely covered the crown of her head and allowed her wealth of sunny hair to show was the cutest thing she'd ever owned.

IRENE smiled over her shoulder as she asked for a number, and she pouted prettily when she failed to get Derry on the line. She tried again and again, and at last was told that Derry was skating on the lake at the country club. She asked to have a message sent to him and gave the number of the store from which she was telephoning so that Derry might call her.

After that she was free to amuse herself for a while. Suddenly it occurred to her that the young store clerk might have some interesting gossip about some of the people she knew. It might even be possible that she could learn something to indicate Gaylord would like to have her return. She'd play her part in a reconciliation if Gaylord and his father would come halfway.

Traveling in luxury had impressed her again with a measure of what she'd lost. She did not know that it is much easier for a poor man to imagine himself rich than for a rich man to imagine himself poor.

Ease and luxury coming to Irene suddenly had given her the idea that she commanded such things because she was herself beautiful. Since she'd left Gaylord she had realized that rich young men do not fall into every beautiful girl's life. As a Prentiss she'd had the opportunity to meet men of wealth. She had not attracted one of them. As an ex-Prentiss she was again just Irene Everett, daughter of a small town grocer. She hadn't enough of the Prentiss money to rise far above this station, and she had no career to remove her from it. She might grow old before she met another wealthy man who wanted to marry her.

HURLEY SEES NO REASON FOR RAIL-WATERWAY ISSUE

Secretary Of War Speaks At Peoria Terminal Dedication Today

Peoria, Ill., June 15—(AP)—The Secretary of War and the Chairman of the Inland Waterways Corporation joined hands today in declaring there was no reason for conflict between America's waterways and railways.

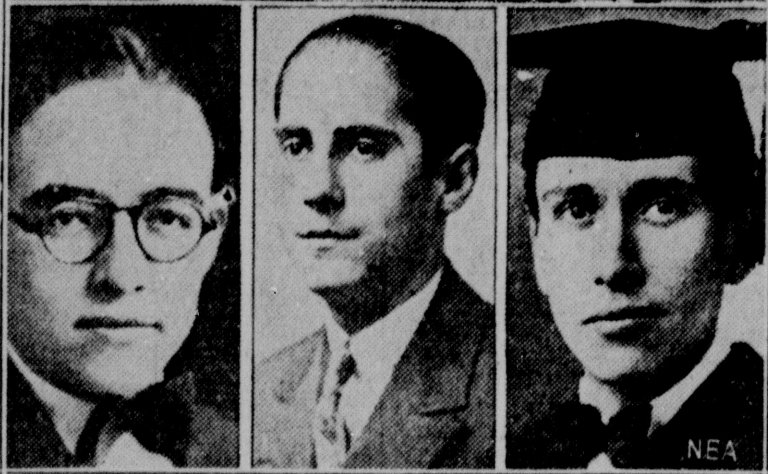

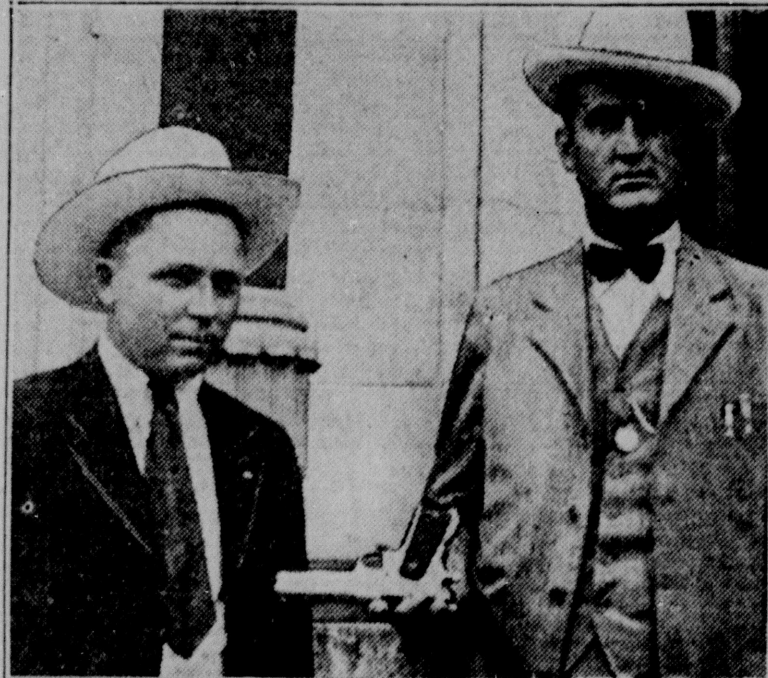

Secretary Patrick J. Hurley, heading an influx of notables for the opening of Peoria's Illinois river terminal, said every means of transportation is supplementary to the other, and all of them, in the beginning, were aided by the government.

"The government," he said, "plays no favorites in its support of the various transportation systems. It recognizes all of them and supports all of them. It considers all of them indispensable to the proper development of our nation. Each form of transportation has its own mission and supplements the other."

Hurley's remarks found an echo in those of Major General T. W. Ashburn, Chairman of the Waterways Board, who said he had never been able to understand "why the railroads should be so bitter about waterways, as water transportation is the only competing form which brings them more revenue than it takes from them."

Gen. Ashburn declared that the restoration of the nation's economic balance depended upon the coordination of rail, water and motor transportation. He said many of the railroad rates were radically wrong because they "bear no relation to the cost of service. The railroads and waterways sell transportation precisely as a manufacturer sells his goods, but the price at which a manufacturer puts his goods on the market bears a real relation to the cost of manufacture. If it did not, his competitors would destroy him. Why shouldn't transportation be sold in the same way; cost, plus a reasonable
